They Played Chop Sticks

AT FIRST glance, holly and chopsticks may seem an odd combination. But, the two joined forces and made a delightful young folks' party Saturday evening at the Fort Myer quarters of Air Force Gen. and Mrs. Curtis LeMay.

The house was decked with boughs of holly, plus a stunning floor-to-ceiling tree trimmed in silver and various shades of pink, for the event given by the LeMays' home-for-the-holidays daughter, Jane.

But, when the 50 guests lined up for supper, there wasn't a turkey or cranberry in sight. On the buffet was a delectable Chinese dinner. There were egg roll stuffed with pheasant, Duck Cantonese, chicken chow mein with almonds and sweet-sour pork. And, dished up right along with the exotic Oriental dishes, were the chopsticks.

"I'LL HAVE to go out in the kitchen and use a fork or I won't get anything to eat," cried pretty Katie Cabell, daughter of Lt. Gen. and Mrs. Charles Cabell.

But, all ended well after Air Force Capt. Dick Twining (his father is Chairman of the Joint Chiefs) gave Katie and a few others a quick lesson in the chopstick arts. Dick is just back from duty in the Hawaiian islands.

Eating their supper together were Robin Van Houten—whose father is Commanding General of the Military District of Washington and Clay Byers. Robin, a student at Carlton College, said she was transferring to Georgetown University to enter their Foreign Service School.

Hostess Jane—who wore a Christmas green dress for her party—ate her supper with Annapolis Midshipman Chris Naguin. A student at Stephens in Missouri, Jane had asked some of her classmates to drop by for the fun.

Among them were blonde

Chartley Ward—in a red velvet sheath trimmed in white mink—and Sabra Krepper, who lives in Cincinnati.

BEFORE SUPPER, the guests were entertained by the "Four Saints"—a comedy quartet who entered the Air Force eight months ago. They enlisted as a group right from a night club engagement at Las Vegas.

Annapolis firstclassman Tom Jacobs was there with his drag, Mary Lawton, whose father is Lt. Gen. William Lawton, Comptroller of the Army.

Another Army brat, Kathie Kirkpatrick (she, too, is a Stephens student) was with Duke student John Harrelson. West Pointers joining in the merrymaking included "Skipper" Schow, son of Director of Army Intelligence and Mrs. Robert Schow; and Chuck Cabell.

Also there were Princeton student, George Lewis—son of Lt. Gen. and Mrs. Millard Lewis—Nathan Twining, home from Oberlin for the holidays, and Carol Sias.
